The theme for the annual meeting was "Promoting International Understanding through the Arts". David Ford of WFDD's "Triad Arts Up Close" radio program interviewed Todd Drake about his current Muslim self-portrait photographic exhibit. Todd is currently in residence at the UNC Chapel Hill's Center for Global Initiatives. Pieces from his acclaimed project, "Esse Quam Videri" – To Be Rather than to Seem", were on display and discussed. In response to the stereotyping of Muslims and in recognition that it is human nature to fear what we do not know, Todd worked with Muslims in North Carolina to create self-portraits that share real reflections of self. Each picture on display represented an individual story. A documentary of the project can be found on the internet at www.todddrake.info. Additional information on the photographic exhibit can be found at www.muslimselfportrait.info.

Other visitors at the meeting were introduced. The meeting adjourned with the group singing, "Let there be Peace".
